Step 1 – Identify grounds for dismissal

Information Sheets on the Tribunal website describe the legal tests for dismissing a complaint.

It furthers the just and timely resolution of the complaint for the Tribunal to consider an application to dismiss the complaint under s. 27(1) of the Human Rights Code because [check all that apply]:

- The Tribunal does not have jurisdiction over the complaint: s. 27(1)(a)
- The complaint has no reasonable prospect of success: s. 27(1)(c)
- The complaint will not benefit the Complainant: s. 27(1)(d)(i)
- The Respondent has already remedied the discrimination: s. 27(1)(d)(ii)
- The Respondent made a reasonable settlement offer: s. 27(1)(d)(ii)
- The parties have settled the complaint: s. 27(1)(d)(ii)
- The complaint should not proceed against individual Respondents: s. 27(1)(d)(ii)
- It does not further the purposes of the Human Rights Code to proceed (other reason): s. 27(1)(d)(ii)
- The complaint was made for improper purposes or in bad faith: s. 27(1)(e)
- The complaint has been appropriately dealt with in another proceeding: s. 27(1)(f)
- All or part of the complaint was filed after the time limit: s. 27(1)(g)

Step 2 – State why the complaint should be dismissed

Examples:

- The Respondent is federally-regulated and the Tribunal does not have jurisdiction (s. 27(1)(a))
- I have copies of text messages that will prove the Respondent did not make the alleged discriminatory comments (s. 27(1)(c))
- The individuals named as Respondents were human resources staff carrying out their duties, they did not make or influence any decisions, they have no individual culpability, and the institutional employer accepts responsibility for their actions (s. 27(1)(d)(ii))
- The Complainant filed a grievance about the same issue, and an arbitrator decided that there was no discrimination (s. 27(1)(f))

Instructions:

A dismissal application must be based on new information or circumstances. New information does not include information already set out in the complaint or response to complaint. Briefly summarize the new information or circumstances and what argument(s) you would make in an application to dismiss the complaint without a hearing:
